Where are your catechists and religion teachers when it comes to our Catholic faith? Find out.

■ What do your teachers and catechists really know and think about the Catholic faith?

As a component of NCEA Rise: A Family of Faith Assessments, NCEA's IFG (Information For Growth, adult survey) provides detailed reporting with correlations to the Catechism of the Catholic Church. This leads to better informed teachers and better instruction with connection to the primary source of our Catholic teaching.

■ It's not just catechetical knowledge. NCEA's IFG also allows schools and parishes to understand the underlying Catholic culture of the adults charged to lead our mission. By assessing your teacher/catechists' attitudes, perceptions, beliefs and practices regarding the Catholic faith, NCEA's IFG provides detailed reporting on topics of interest to your teachers/catechists, which can inform professional development opportunities.

■ With NCEA's IFG, you can connect your teachers and catechists with NCEA's incredible network of other Catholic educational professionals across the U.S. sharing best practices. Data can also be used in local parish/school decision-making and strategic planning to advance the Church's mission.

If you don't know where to start,

In their life and ministry, priests must not only resist the discouragement of desolation but also an energy, a consolation that may draw them toward a good thing— but not one that God desires for them. In eight clear and practical rules, Saint Ignatius of Loyola provides a roadmap through such sensitive discernments. In this book, the first of its kind, Father Gallagher applies these eight rules specifically to the priestly vocation. This short, easily read, and profound book will provide light and guidance to any priest who reads it.
